Revolutionizing Military Health and Medicine through Total Exposure Health

The Air Force Surgeon General's Office is embarking on a bold initiative called Total Exposure Health (TEH). TEH integrates occupational, lifestyle, and environmental exposure data from traditional and new personal monitoring exposure assessment technologies with clinical and genomic data and advanced analytics to provide a capability that will: advance the disciplines of health and medicine, improve the health and well-being of military members and beneficiaries, enabling them to take control of their own health.
